M93 Houston County Airport

Aviation Moves Tennessee

Tennessee's aviation system has 76 public-use airports that support a wide range of activities, from commercial airline travel to private aircraft operations. Aviation contributes approximately 9% of Tennessee's gross domestic product (GDP) and generates an estimated $53.8 billion in total economic impact across the state. To better understand how these airports support Tennessee's economy, the Tennessee Department of Transportation (TDOT) Aeronautics Division conducted an updated Aviation Economic Impact Study.

About Houston County Airport

Serving the City of Stewart and surrounding areas of Houston County in Middle Tennessee, Houston County Airport (M93) provides general aviation access within a largely rural region characterized by agricultural activity, forested landscapes, and small communities. The airport serves as a local transportation resource for residents, businesses, and visitors while supporting general aviation activity in an area where air access complements regional transportation options.

Houston County Airport is a publicly owned, public-use general aviation facility featuring a 3,000-foot runway. This runway length supports light general aviation aircraft and accommodates activities such as recreational flying, pilot training, and personal transportation. The airport provides a convenient aviation access point for local users while supporting transient aircraft operations.

The airport supports a variety of general aviation activities and provides aviation access for the surrounding community. Its location enhances regional connectivity and offers an alternative transportation option for residents, businesses, and visitors traveling throughout the region.
