About Scott Municipal Airport

Serving Scott County and surrounding communities in eastern Tennessee, Scott Municipal Airport (SCX) functions as an important general aviation gateway for a predominantly rural region characterized by small towns, natural resources, and recreational destinations. The airport provides aviation access in an area where surface travel distances between communities are longer, and air transportation supports business activity, emergency access, and regional connectivity.

Scott Municipal Airport features a 5,506-foot runway, allowing it to accommodate a variety of general aviation aircraft, including business aircraft, air-transport services, and aircraft requiring maintenance support. This runway capability supports a broad range of aviation operations while enhancing regional accessibility.

A focused set of aviation-related businesses operate directly on-airport. ATS Tennessee provides aircraft maintenance and repair services, supporting safe and reliable operations for both based and visiting aircraft.
